The Packers are the only NFL team that is corporately owned- and every now and then, they sell stock in the team (although it doesn't pay any dividends...)

No wonder their fans are so dedicated...

Lincoln Logs were invented by John Wright

Frank Lloyd Wright's son.

(And sales tanked when the manufacturer tried to switch to plastic. They had to go back to wood PDQ.)

The "David Bowie"
(The cocktail)

one part bourbon

Five parts chocolate liqueur

"Today I learned..."

A week containing a education of

Thomas Vose,

Librarian (and extremely amateur artist)

Vol. 1

"There are a thousand hacking at the branches of evil to one who is striking at the root."

- Henry David Thoreau

There's not much left of the original Mission Santa Ines.

Settlers cannibalized the roof tiles for their buildings, and the adobe melted in the rain.

3D printing food is a thing.

Meat substitutes, pastries, algae and ice cream are all used.

(Literally not at the same time)

Jockey Russell Baze has won over 12,000 horse races since 1974.

(Not "raced in" - won)